

Content

Jan Stoll

Disability Movements: National Policies and Transnational Perspectives – Introductory Remarks . . . . .	5
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	---

Anne Klein

Governing Madness – Transforming Psychiatry: Disability History and the Formation of Cultural Knowledge in West Germany in the 1970s and 1980s . . . . .	11
----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

Monika Baár

Informal Networks, International Developments and the Founding of the First Interest-Representing Associations of Disabled People in Hungary in the Late Socialist Period (1970s–1980s) . . . . .	39
---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

Jan Stoll

The German Disability Movement as a Transnational, Entangled New Social Movement . . . . .	63
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

Paul van Trigt

A Blind Spot of a Guiding Country? Human Rights and Dutch Disability Groups Since 1981 . . . . .	87
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	----

Anne Waldschmidt/Anemari Karačić/Andreas Sturm/Timo Dins

“Nothing About Us Without Us”: Disability Rights Activism in European Countries – A Comparative Analysis . . . . .	103
-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

Sebastian Weinert

Review Article: Disability Movements – A Growing Field of Research? . . . . .	139
-------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----