Notes on Authors

Stefan Berger is Professor of Modern and Contemporary History at the University of Glamorgan. His publications include: Policy Concertation and Social Partnership in Western Europe. Lessons for the 21st Century (Berghahn, 2002; edited with Hugh Compston), Social Democracy and the Working Class in 19th and 20th Century Germany (Longman, 2000), and 'Labour in Comparative Perspective', in: Duncan Tanner, Pat Thane and Nick Tiratsoo (eds), Labour's First Century (CUP, 2000). He is currently working on the relationship between the British left and the German Democratic Republic.

Lawrence Black is Research Fellow in Modern British History at the University of Bristol. The author of The Political Culture of the Left in Affluent Britain, 1951-1964: Old Labour, New Britain? (Palgrave 2002), he is currently researching affluence and post-1945 British political culture.

John Callaghan is Professor of Politics at the University of Wolverhampton. Among his numerous publications are Cold War, Crisis and Conflict: The History of the Communist Party of Great Britain, 1951-1968 (Lawrence and Wishart, 2002); The Retreat of Social Democracy (MUP, 2000); Socialism in Britain (Blackwell, 1990).

Andy Croll is Principal Lecturer at the University of Glamorgan. His publications include Civilizing the Urban: Popular Culture and Public Space, Merthyr c. 1870–1914 (Univ. of Wales Press 2000), "People's Remembrancers" in a Post-Modern age: Contemplating the Non-Crisis of Welsh Labour History', Llafur: the Journal of Welsh Labour History, 8, no. 1 (2000), pp. 5-17. 'Street disorder, Surveillance and Shame: Regulating Behaviour in the Public Spaces of the Late Victorian British Town', Social History, 24 (1999), pp. 250–268. He is currently beginning work on an environmental history of the South Wales coalfield.

Steven Fielding is ????????????????????? in the School of English, Sociology, Politics and Contemporary History and a member of the European Studies Research Institute, Salford University. He is the author of The Labour Party. Continuity and Change in the Making of 'New' Labour' (Palgrave, 2002) and is currently finishing work on Labour and Social Change during the 1960s that is due to be published by Manchester University Press in 2003.

John L Halstead was a Lecturer at the University of Sheffield Department of Extra-Mural Studies until 1996. He was an editor of the Bulletin of the Society for the Study of Labour History from 1971 and through its transformation to Labour History Review, retiring at the end of 1995. His essays and article in English include "The Voice of the West Riding: Promoters and Supporters of a Provicial Unstamped Newspapers 1833-1834, and is currently Chair of the Societyfor the Study of Labour History. He has been working recently on communism and the history of the British labour press.

Karen Hunt is Senior Lecturer in History at Manchester Metropolitan University. She has published widely on British women's politics, particularly on aspects of the gendering of socialism including Equivocal Feminists: The Social Democratic Federation and the Woman Question, 1884–1911 (CVP 1996) and, with June Hannam, Socialist Women. Britain, 1880s to 1920s (Rootledge2002). She is also an editor of Labour History Review and is corrently working on the life and politics of Dora Montefiore.

Ross McKibbin is Tutor in Modern History, St John's College, Oxford. Among his most important works are: The Evolution of the Labour Party (OUP, 1975); The Ideologies of Class (OUP, 1991) and Classes and Cultures: England 1918–1951 (OUP, 1998).

Kevin Morgan lectures in the Department of Government at the University of Manchester. He edits the journal Socialist History and is the author of a biography of Harry Pollitt (MUP, 1993). With Andrew Flinn and Gidon Cohen he has written a prosopographical study of the British Communist Party, People of a Special Mould? Communists in British society 1920–1991, which will be published by Rivers Oram Press in 2003.

Edmund Neill is currently Lecturer in Modern History at Somerville College, Oxford and was previously Lecturer in Modern History at Christ Church, Oxford.He is currently completing his D. Phil. thesis on the concept of tradition in the work of Michael Oakeshott, Hannah Arendt and Hans-Georg Gadamer, and is the author of a forthcoming article on the British Idealist D. G. Ritchie for the journal The History of European Ideas.

Alastair J. Reid is a Fellow and Lecturer in History at Girton College, Cambridge. His publications include Social Classes and Social Relations in Britain, 1850–1914 (Cambridge, 1995) and A Short History of the Labour Party with Henry Pelling (11th edition, London 1996). He is currently writing a new history of British trade unionism for Penguin.

Dan Weinbren works at the Open University, Milton Keynes. He is interested in associational life and social capital. He has written a book based on the oral testimony of older Labour Party members, two on the development of the state armaments industries and one on a family firm over five generations. The Founder Chair of the international Friendly Societies Research Group, he is currently Series Editor of a microfilm series of friendly societies records.

Chris Wrigley is Professor of Modern British History and Head of the School of History and Art History at Nottingham University. He was President of the Historical Association,1996-99. He was awarded an honorary Litt.D by the University of East Anglia in 1998. His books include David Lloyd George and the British Labour Movement (1976), Lloyd George and the Challenge of Labour (1990) and British Trade Unions Since 1933 (2002). Currently he is researching the recent history of the British coal industry, 1982–2002.